

EVALUATION OF KNOWLEDGE IN ECONOMIC POLICY AND BUSINESS ACTIVITY

The assessment of knowledge will follow the general rules in force in ISEG with some specificity:

1. In addition to usual exams, four short preliminary tests will be held in the beginning of the corresponding practical classes chosen for that purpose: two before the currently period of mid-term tests in the School (we don't have mid-term exams in this curricular unity) and the other two after this period and before the official end of the semester. The evaluation material for each of these tests will be previously defined. In this context, preliminary tests mean that they will be held before the analysis of the papers in class.

The four tests will be held in the following dates: March 3; March 24; April 21; and May 5.

2. Students will not have access to the Normal-period Exam if they score below 10 points, on average, in the previous four preliminary tests. These students will, however, have access to other exams.

3. The final grade at the end Normal-period Exam will be calculated based on the following criteria: Sum of 40% of the average mark resulting from the four preliminary tests and 60% of the written exam mark.

4. In the case of those who made the four preliminary tests, and go to the Appeal-period Exam, the final classification will follow the criterion exposed in the previous point, safeguarding however the prevalence of the Exam's mark in face of that represented by the average of the four tests.

5. The final marks of points 3 and 4 may be increased based on the quality of the student participation during the theoretical and practical classes.

6. For other cases, only the final classification obtained in the individual written exam will be considered.

7. For any other aspect related to the evaluation process, and not included in the above items, we will follow the patterns of the similar curricular unities lectured in Portuguese.
